CRISIS RESPONSE NETWORK

What is the Crisis Response Network (CRN)?

CRN was developed to support school communities in crisis preparedness, response, and recovery efforts. CRN's mission is to provide pre-incident training to school and community-based personnel to build capacity to respond in a structured and effective manner.

A network of trained crisis responders stands ready to support school communities upon request. This mobilized team employs Critical Incident Stress Management (CISM) protocol to support the emotional recovery of students and staff.

What is Critical Incident Stress Management (CISM)?

CISM protocol employs a debriefing model that allows trained crisis responders to quickly assess the emotional state of large numbers of students and staff in a brief period of time. This structured process allows school communities to achieve a healthy recovery from traumatic events at a faster rate

What are the goals of CRN?

- To develop a cadre of trained crisis responders serving all Orange County schools
- To coordinate, manage, and mobilize responders during a crisis response
- To develop standardized response protocols
- To support delivery of aftercare services in times of need
- To deliver crisis response training to school and community personnel

How do I become a responder for CRN?
